The Culmination of a | Fend Among Cherokees-Ambushed Assassins Riddle their Enemy with Shot.

Fort Smith, Arkansas, special to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, 16th: "A long ex-isting feud between Duncan Fence, John Lee and others on one side, and Cornelius Sanders and his friends on the other, all Chero kee Indians, culminated in the assassination of Sanders on the west bank of the Arkansas river, directly opposite to Fort Smith, last night. Sanders lives in the Cherokee Nation, five or six miles from this place, and had been in town yesterday with a team, and did not cross the ferry on his return home un-til dark. It seems that Fence, Lee, and a white man named Charles Samuels were lying in wait for him, and as he drove up the bank opened fire on him, two with revolvers and one with a double-barreled shotgun. When the firing commenced a man in the wagon with Sanders improved from it and rear and the term had been and the same of the s jumped from it and ran, and the team be coming frightened, ran away and was not found until about daylight this morning, when it was discovered in the woods about a

At Hastings, Michigan, last June, while performing, Davenport met it. with a severe accident, which laid him up at "h lodginghouse in New York, on Third avenue and Forty-Fourth street, where, on the secwas intimate with a woman who was anxious to adopt a child, and induced the girl to steal Mrs. Davenport's little girl by promising her fifty dollars. The girl consented, and on the night of the twelfth of July, the little one was taken from the cot while the mother slept and given to the woman. When the midwife called in the morning the girl told that the child had died early in the evening revious and had been given to the Sisters of Charity to bury, as it was not weather and de composition had set in. The midwife told this story to Mrs. Davenport, who was then confined to her bed. She believed it, as both ildren appeared weakly. On the eighteenth of July she, with her boy infant, joined Mr. Davenport in Cincinnati. On the third of August the boy died and was buried in Spring Grove cemetery. Mrs. Davenport then secured an engagement in this city, where she has since remained. Last evening, just as Mrs. Davenport was about to go on the stage to play her part of the 'Stolen Child,' she was handed a letter, which informed her that the child, which she supposed to be dead, was alive and well. It appears that the husband of the woman who had adopted the child would not permit her to keep it. therefore, returned it to the girl who could. Last Monday the girl met with a serious accident in a cotton factory at Phila-delphia, and, believing she was about to die, ady, and begged the latter to discover the reabouts of its parents, and satisfy them that she is still alive, which she did accordingly. The child is now in charge of a poor family at 116 Division street, Philadelphia.

From the Lost Ærenauts-The Mystery Made to Trace Them.

Attaching to their Fate-Efforts St. Louis dispatch to the Cincinnati Gazette, 17th: "The mystery attaching to the fate of the balloonists Wise and Burr is still a sensa-tion here, and the bulletin-board in front of a clothing house, upon which the dispatches received as to the course of the balloon first appeared, is still watched curiously, though almost hopelessly, by the passing hundreds. The brief excitement caused by the discovery of a lost balloon north of Milwaukee has died come general that the Pathfinder, with Wise and Burr, is either in Lake Michigan or in some vast forest of Michigan or Canada. This is the general belief, but it should be added that it is by no means shared by professional balloonists, who yet assert that the Path-finder could not have remained in the air long enough to reach either the lake or the northern forests, and that the balloon is cer-tainly within a hundred and fifty miles of the city. It seems now, though rather unlikely, that the experts are in the right. The exploring party which lately visited Illinois searched very carefully the Macoupin bottoms, where it was thought the balloon might have come down, and beyond this point the country in the course known to have been taken by the air-ship is so open that it scarcely could have come down with-out attracting attention from some one. The country is thickly settled, and since the departure of the balloon the people have been on the lookout for it in all directions. Even the relatives and friends of Wise, at first nore sanguine than those who were interested in his companion, have now about given up hope of ever seeing the veteran alive. It is nearly three weeks now since the ill-fated ascension was made."

He boldly proclaimed to her that his home and wife were distasteful to him; that his love there had long since died: and that she alone, of all women, was the object of his undying love. It only added to his unholy flame that she who refused to listen to him bore an unblemished reputation From a mass of letters written by Bennet to this young woman, abundant evidence may be obtained to prove that, while he persecuted her under the vilest im-pulses of his lewd nature, he still knew her to be pure, and that the testimony of friends who knew her before, during and since her business associations with him, are all strong in her commendation. Being unable to pre-vail with professions of love and offers to give the lady a share in his business, Bennett dis charged her, expecting that poverty would make her yield, and his persecutions were so serious that the young lady fied to friends in another State, where she now is."
